PREFACE.

The following list contains the titles of a collection of books placed on open shelves in the Central Library. An identical collection is also placed in each Branch. The list therefore holds good for all the sets both as respects titles and shelf-numbers. These books may be handled directly by the readers and may be drawn for home use when properly charged.

The collection is not offered as a model of its kind, nor is it to be regarded as representative literature for Young People; least of all should it be taken as a complete list of what the Library contains for this class of readers. It is simply a selection of some interesting and attractive, possibly of stimulating and suggestive works of adventure, travel, history, biography, and of the imagination, and may be handled without the intervention of an attendant.

In this edition, the books have been grouped into a few simple classes; at the end is a list of titles not only of stories, but of many other works. Where the arrangement of titles under an author is not alphabetical, the proper sequence of his works is followed.
